Anthurium

Anthurium plant is among the best-known tropical flowers. Anthurium flowers are long-lasting, and will bloom almost year-round. Bright light will make these beauties bloom.

Sunlight: Give your plant bright light, but keep it out of direct sun.

Water: Keep soil evenly moist spring through to autumn, and slightly drier in winter.

Humidity: Moderate to high humidity. Mist the plant frequently, or place it on a tray of wet pebbles. Grouping plants also helps to maintain the humidity around them.

Temperature: Warm room temperature (75-80°F/24-27°C) during the day. Cooler (65-70°F/18-21°C) at night.

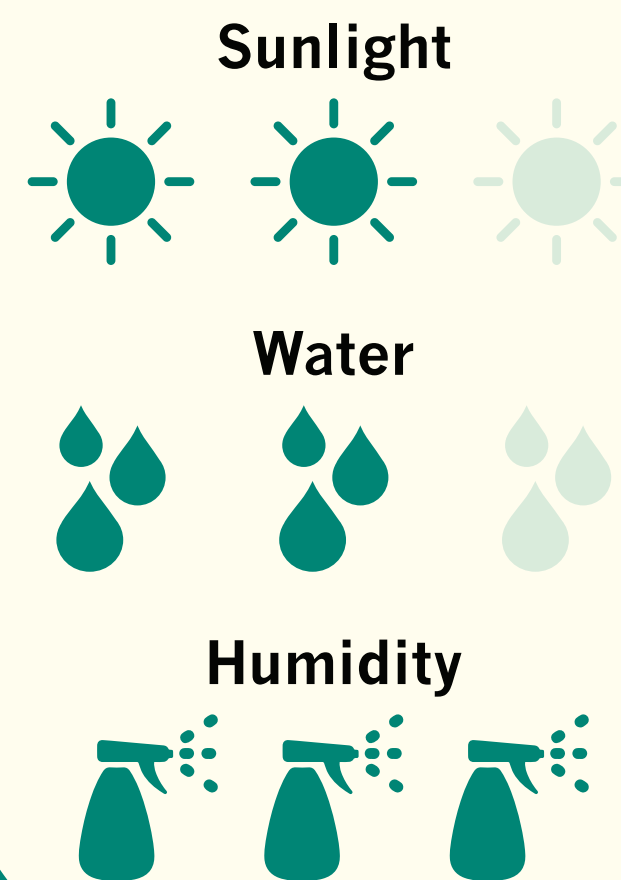

Feed: Feed every 2 weeks in spring and summer with a high-phosphorus liquid fertilizer diluted by half.

Repotting: Divide crowded clumps when repotting and plant separately in small containers. New plants should bloom in about a year.

Flower Care: Bright indirect light will make them bloom.

Top Tip: Anthurium leaves are naturally glossy. Just wipe them with a damp cloth to keep them dust-free.

Caution: The sap of this plant is poisonous. Keep it away from children and pets who may play with or chew on its foliage.
